BACKUP: The Liaison for Health and Physical Education lead a discussion with health educators about the "Space Monkey Challenge" known to staff as the "Pass Out Game." The health teachers, adhering to the Health Curriculum, focus on refusal skills, decision making, health knowledge and setting goals. These are all part of a good health education class and apply to all facets of health from substance abuse, sexual health, injury and prevention, wellness and emotional and social growth. The Health educators help students to apply the skills taught to every aspect of their lives when faced with any challenge, teaching them to make good decisions, refuse unhealthy choices and set strong goals for a healthy lifestyle.
