

The Federal Education Innovation and Research Program competition has been focused on developing and testing research projects, requiring partnership with an institution of higher education or similar research partner. The program intent is not to provide immediate direct services to local students or staff. In the most recent round, it was not possible during the time available to identify a research project or partnership that would have had a reasonable chance of being funded. However, the Administration will continue to investigate these opportunities as they arise.